The Partner's Edge: Keys to Building Your Law Practice With Purpose and Integrity

The skills lawyers need to build a thriving practice aren't a mystery, but we rarely consider how to do the things that make the most difference. With focus on the right things at the right time, it's possible to build your practice without sacrificing the rest of your life. Learn to balance billables and client development, and explore the key skills and behaviors that give you the edge.

Re-Thinking Mentorship

Most professional organizations use outdated and simplistic methods to create mentorship opportunities. By re-thinking these programs holistically, you can amplify the value of your mentorship relationships.

Why Your Firm Needs Values, Vision, and Real Strategy

Successful organizations spend time and energy developing long-term goals and the strategy to reach them. The planning process may include articulating or refining the values intended to drive action toward those goals, but too often those values only live in documents or on websites. Aligning action with values -- and the way we do that -- is the key to creating dynamic and durable organizational strategy..

Ben is a leadership coach and consultant who brings decades of leadership training and development experience. From his twenty-year career as U.S. Army helicopter pilot and military attorney to years as a federal government leader and recognized professionalism expert, Ben is a resource to lawyers, law firms, and other professionals working to shift performance and culture.
